Once upon a time

THE TAFT SENIOR, PUBLISHED BY THE SENIOR CLASS OF JUNE 1953,

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT HIGH SCHOOL, BRONX, N. Y., ROBERT B. BRODIE, PRINCIPAL

The Enchanted

ONCE UPON A TIME, a million smiles, two thousand tears ago, we first entered Taft.

In the mystical atmosphere of this land of the disappearing swimming pools and vanishing escalators, we passed through many and varied stages until we reached the enchanted state. We are now Seniors!

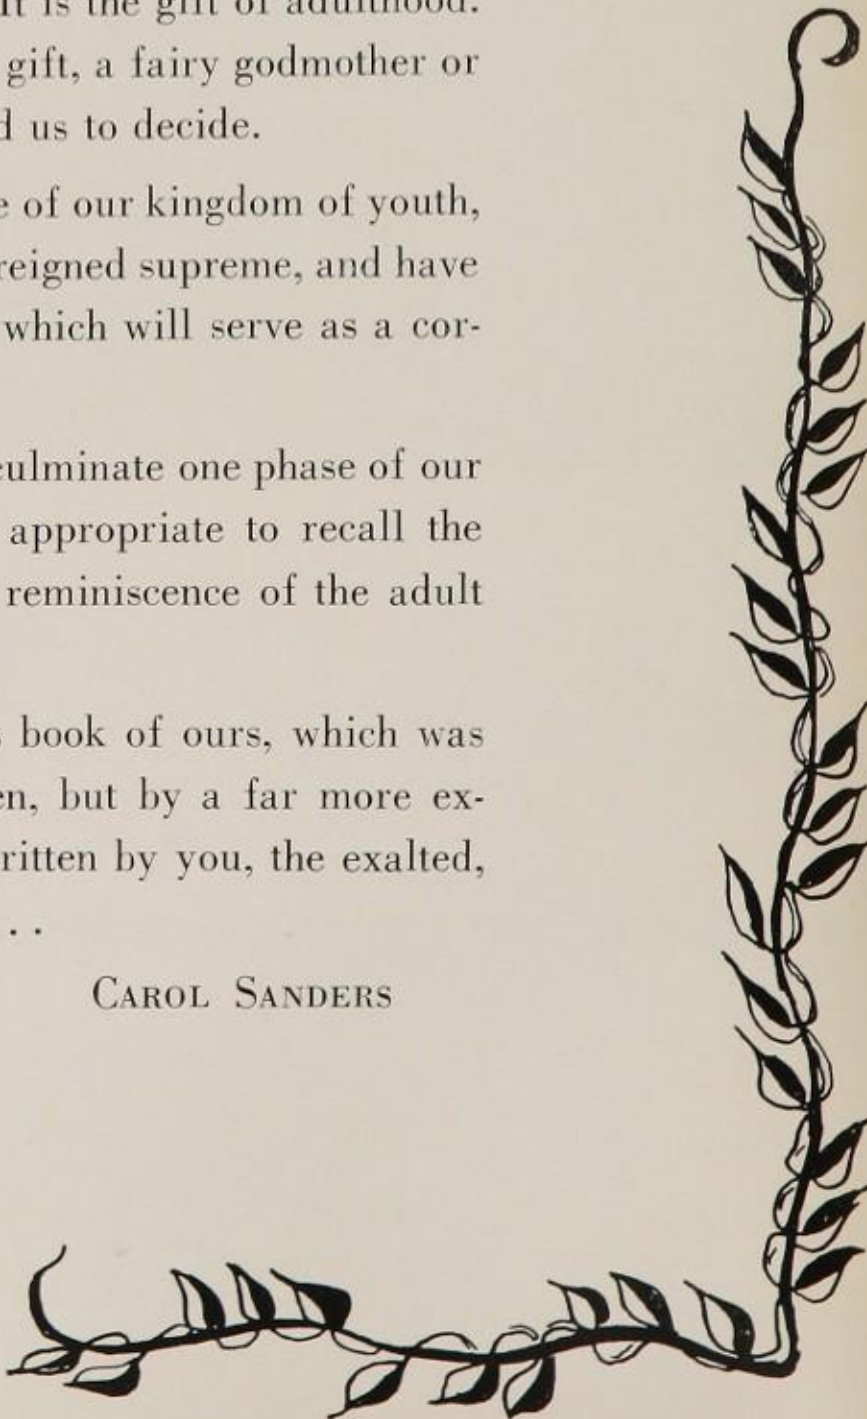

The state of seniorhood is indeed a strange one, for it marks a beginning and an end. For we are about to be given a gift, which although not rare, is ever being sought. It is the gift of adulthood. We cannot yet say who has given us this gift, a fairy godmother or some sadistic witch. That is for time and us to decide.

At any rate, we must now take leave of our kingdom of youth, a kingdom where our imaginations have reigned supreme, and have given us delightful fancies and dreams which will serve as a cornerstone in our castle of adulthood.

Now, in this enchanted time as we culminate one phase of our lives and welcome another, we feel it appropriate to recall the treasured fairy tales of our youth, the reminiscence of the adult and the anticipation of the child.

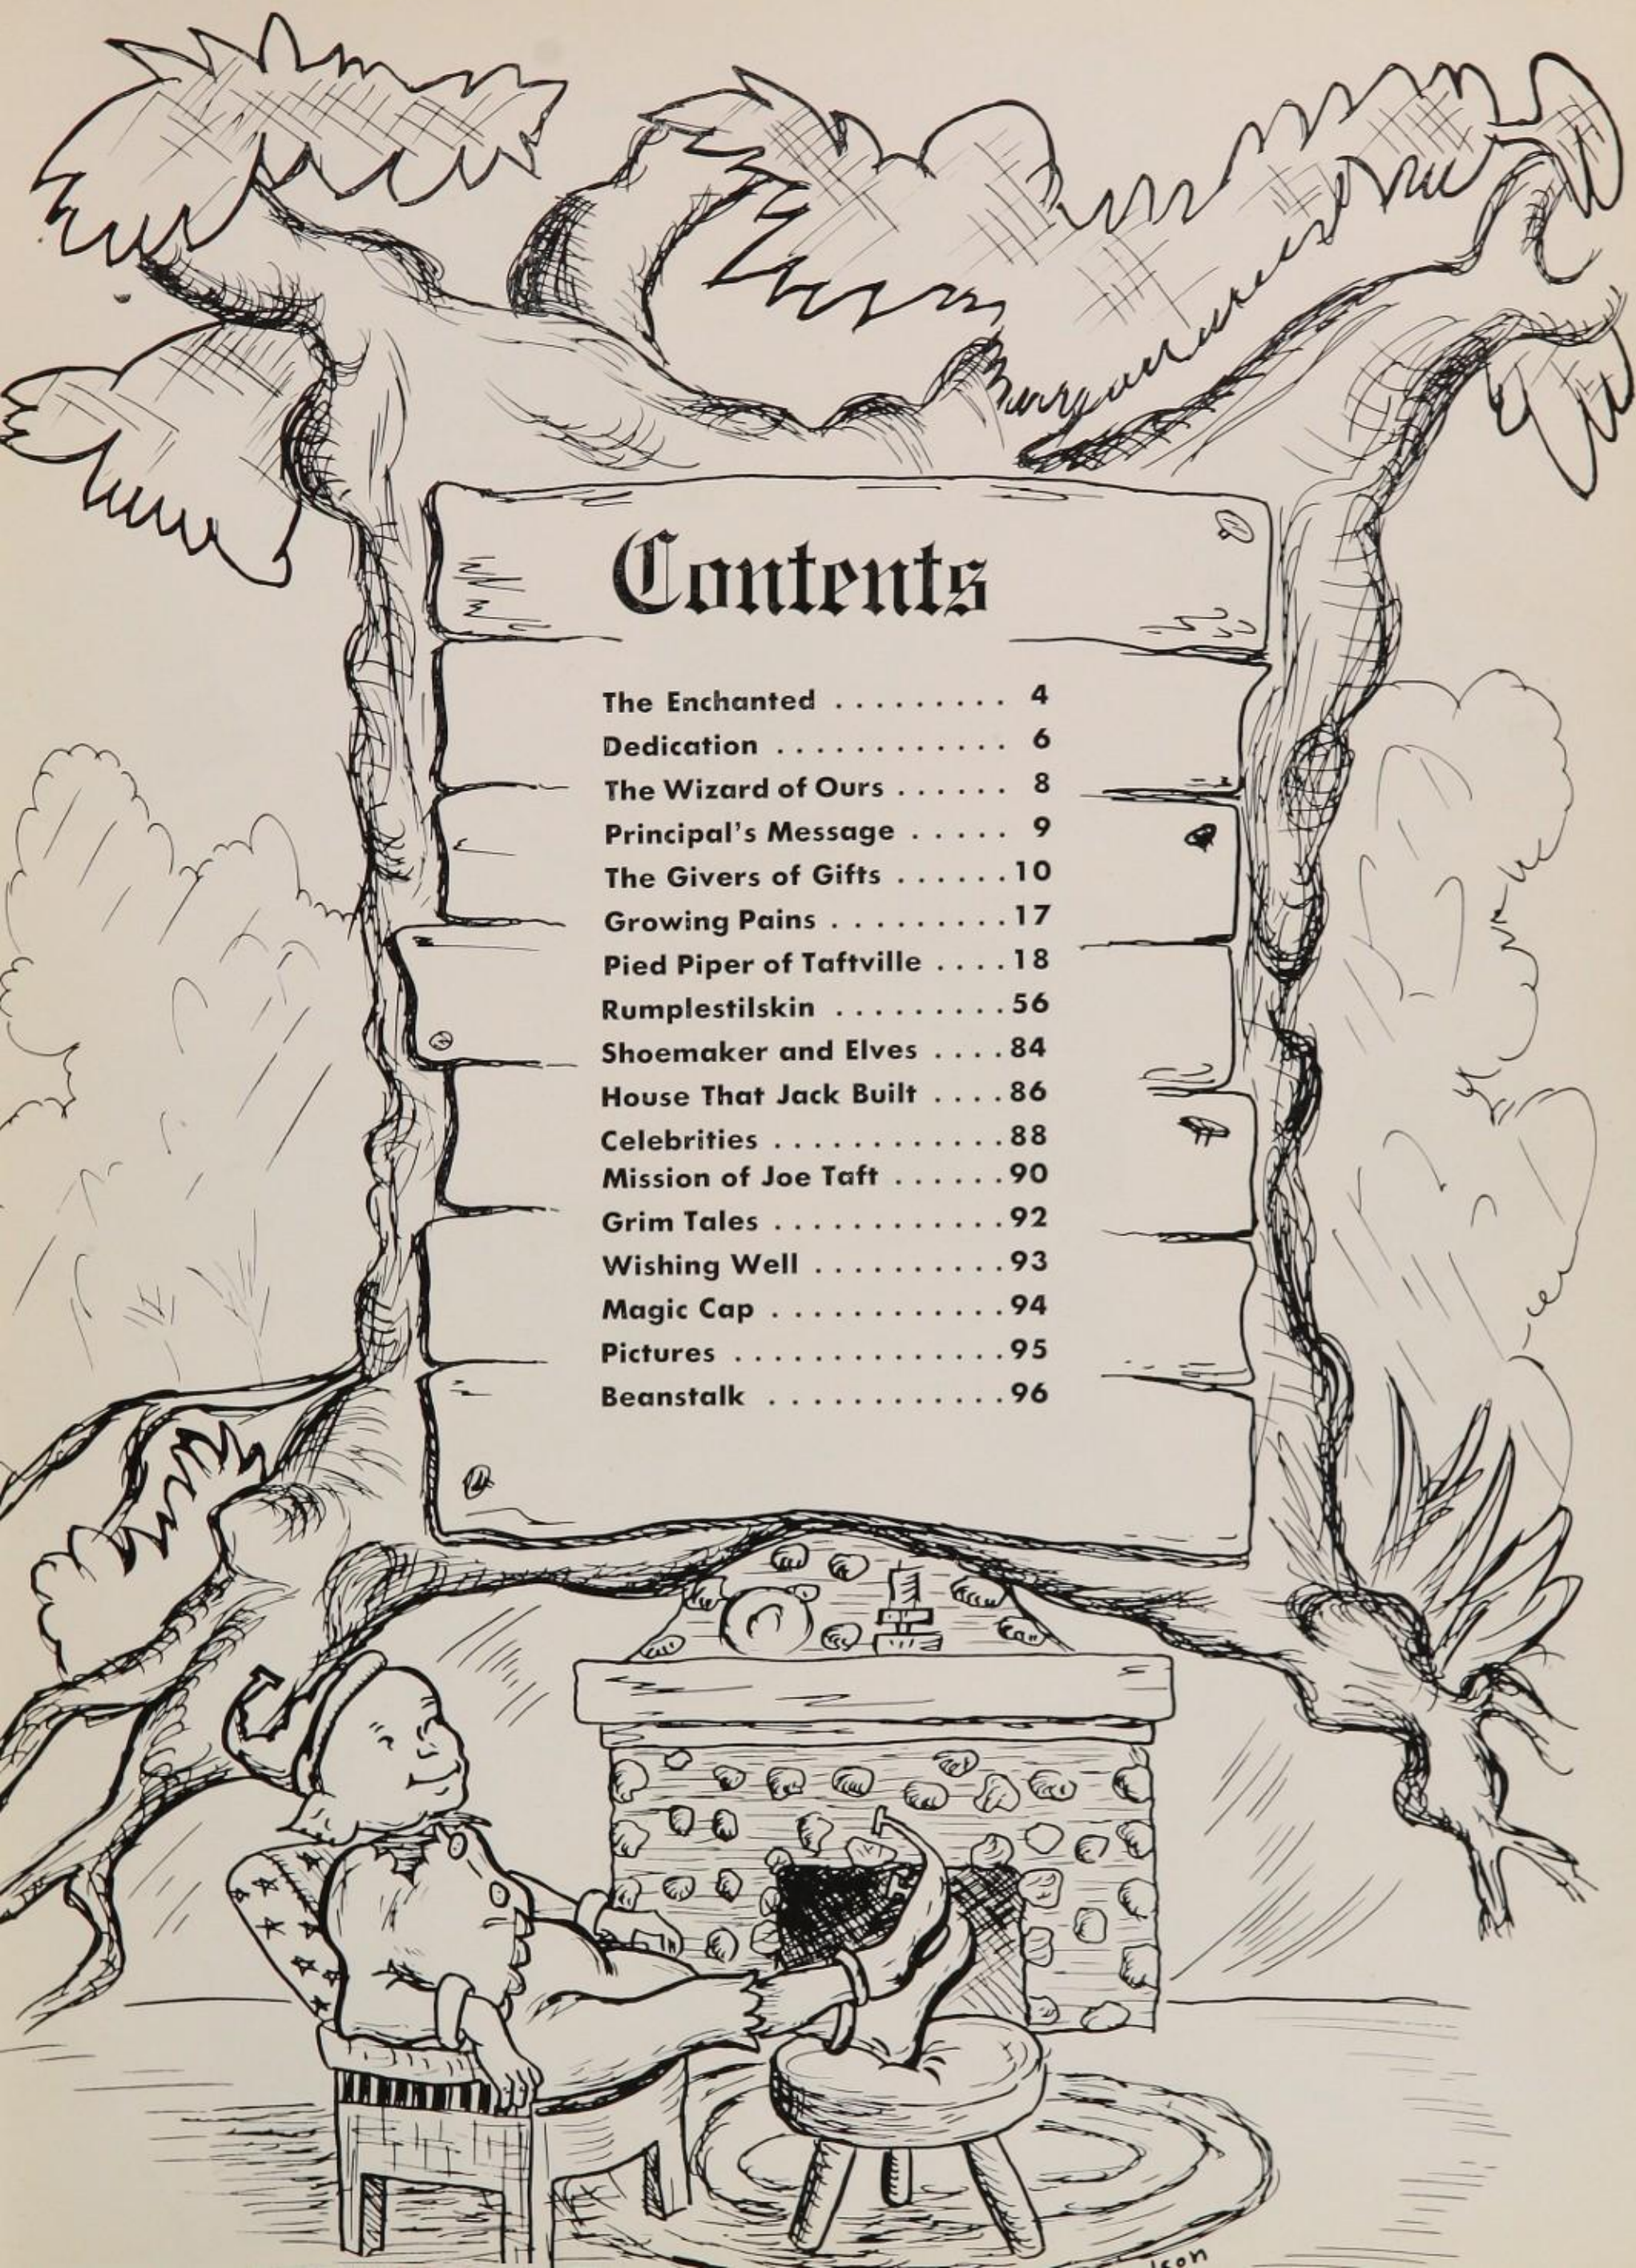

We ask you to read carefully this book of ours, which was written not by Grimm, nor by Andersen, but by a far more exciting and imaginative author. It was written by you, the exalted, envied senior, by you—the enchanted. . . .

DEDICATION

During our four years journey through our enchanted castle, we, the Aladdins and Cinderellas of the future, found strong counsel everywhere we turned in the guidance of our FAIRY GODPARENTS. These sages took the form of our official teachers during our travels, and never failed to rescue us from the dragon of despair or the witch of gloom.

AND NOW WE'RE SENIORS! We've scaled the wall, done all the terrible tasks and wakened the sleeping beauties in ourselves. We're leaving our protected kingdom to go out into another one, but we couldn't leave without thanking the good people who watched over us so carefully for four years.

To each FAIRY GODMOTHER and FAIRY GODFATHER, our official teachers, we shout our praises, shower our gratitude and humbly dedicate this Yearbook.

Wizard of Ours

MR. BRODIE

As it was when fear was struck into the hearts of the animals as they entered the awesome kingdom of the "Wizard of Oz", so it was that we as freshmen feared to pass the magic circle surrounding our wizard's chamber. But through the years we have ceased to fear and have grown to love this "Wizard of Ours". He has aroused the best in all of us. He has made us realize the importance of character, scholarship, and service. And so on this, our day of graduation, we are leaving our world of dependency, and entering a new one of responsibility. We hope in future years to grow in wisdom through this man's influence.

March 5, 1953

To the Class of June 1953.

Dear Graduates:

Your theme, "Fairy Tales," takes us all back in memory to happy childhood days. The golden reflection of those days when fairy tales were very real to us lights our way through life quite as much as the more somber light we gain from our serious studies.

It is not surprising that as high school seniors you should choose to look back on fascinating tales of the world of fantasy in which the prince always marries the princess and right always triumphs. Though all of us strive constantly to reach the goal of happiness, the older and wiser we become, the more we realize that no fairy godmother can wave a wand for us and make our dreams come true. We must work to bring the real world of daily life closer to the ideal world for which we yearn.

If we at Taft have helped you to envisage a worthy, ideal world and to prepare for its realization, we have done well. May you ever enjoy your memories of the past and realize all our hopes and yours for a bright future!

Sincerely yours,

PRINCIPAL

MR. JASON

Most of the time Mr. Jason can be found in his office attending to the affairs of the school. But, it seems, he can always find time to take care of the worries of the students. Rarely, if ever, does anything take precedence over student affairs when he has knowledge of them.

We of Taft thank you, Mr. Jason, for all you have done for us in the past, and all we know you will do for those in the future.

MISS SHAPIRO

We, the Seniors of Taft, regret sorely that Miss Shapiro is not to be found in the familiar Mathematics Department office this term. However, we have appreciated her as much in her capacity as Dean of Girls, during the absence of Mrs. Ascher, as in her usual function as chairman of the Mathematics Department. We do congratulate you, Miss Shapiro, on the wonderful job you have done in both.

Mrs. Ascher:

Upon entering Taft, all freshmen immediately felt the influence of Mrs. Ascher's guiding hand. She helped us adjust ourselves to the many difficulties which confronted us during our stay in this strange new land. Now, we as seniors can do no more than give our thanks to you, Mrs. Ascher, for all the help that you have given us.

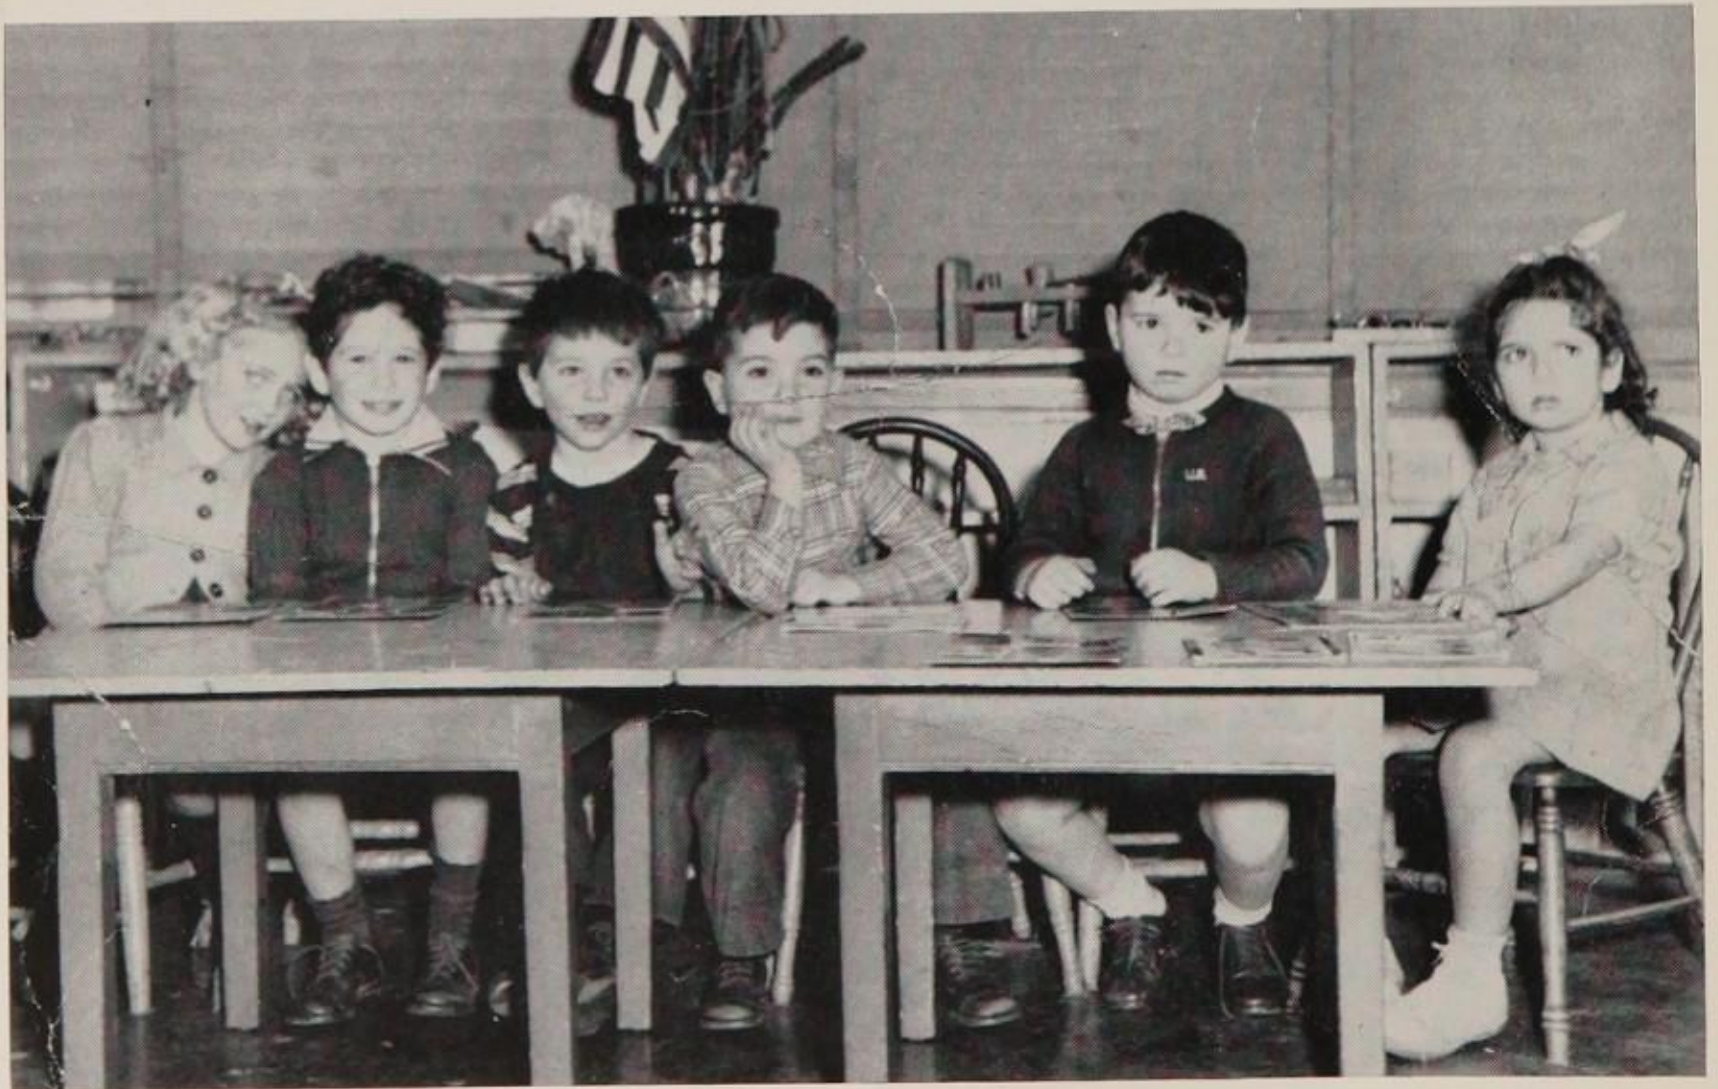

BETTY A. COHEN
BETTE J. FEINGOLD

The Givers of Gifts

Four years ago we began our apprenticeship to the rulers of the Palace-In-The-Swamp, in order to claim their promised gifts. When we first entered, we wandered about the strange Caverns of the Departments, faithfully serving many masters, and in the end receiving our magic presents. When all the gifts had been given, we took fond leave of our kind instructors, officially received our royal titles, and went on to conquer new kingdoms.

Growing Pains

1. I entered Taft as an innocent, adorable, freshman, being immediately indoctrinated into the routine.

2. In my second term I took work seriously.

3. But by the time third term had come around, I was saying, "Enough! No more 1,000 word compositions, please!"

4. Fourth term saw me developing test-taking techniques.

5. Time is passing; I think I am also!

6. In sixth term I began taking an active part in school activities: watching!

7. Seventh term went slowly; I couldn't wait till the time when I would be a Senior.

8. Finally my Senior term, and the announcement of dues — $8.25!

All things come to an end. Here I am graduated, now adult in my actions, a man of the world. BUT STILL WAITIN'.

The Pied Piper of Taftville

Before the Piper came to town
We students were troubled by vermin—
You know the kind, end-terms, pinkcards,
And all the plagues of learnin',
But he had a way of helping us
Which filled us with elation.
Which tricked the RATS and drowned them all
In the Sea of Graduation

But this Piper's price was very steep
We discovered to our dismay.
He planned to lead us, everyone
To a place, so far away.
He made us leave our sheltered nook,
Leave all the things we knew.
Alone we must make our way in the world
Of today and tomorrow too.

And so we all did follow him,
Each one was filled with fear.
But here the story takes a twist—
We didn't disappear!
For here we are, yes one and all
Each ready to do his best
In business, college, anywhere,
To attain his final quest.

*Best luck and good wishes
Uncle Harry*

The last of us has followed the Piper through Taftville, and out. We were children when he first appeared and now as he leads us to the Strange Mountain, we have gained four years and much wisdom. Many times the older, substantial citizens of Taftville have wept for us, and sometimes we were deaf to the lure of the Piper's music, but he has safely brought us all, together, to the threshold of Paradise. Once we cross we shall disappear into the Strange Mountain to join the fate of those who have followed the Piper before us.

As we say a sad farewell to Taftville, we know, whatever happens, we shall always honor it, and that soon there will be others from our town to follow the Piper across the threshold into the unknown along the same road.

The Mission of Joe Taft

In the far off land of the “Yew-knighted States,” a little kingdom nestled between skyscrapers and elevated subways. It was located on a little hill called Morris Avenue, completely surrounded by Japanese cherry trees.

The kingdom had been built in 1940, and though every year it sank a little further into the ground, it was in pretty good condition.

It was ruled by a very nice king and was a very happy kingdom, as far as kingdoms go.

The king had one pet hobby, and that was collecting children. When the hundred room cold water castle in which he lived became too crowded, he sent a couple of hundred kids out to do good deeds, such as rescuing blondes in run-away Cadillacs.

One day, Joe Taft (known as J.T. to his friends) was brought before the king. Luckily he was dressed in his Thursday best. A quiet orange shirt blended beautifully with an apple green tie. His pink pegged pants were in perfect harmony with his ox-blood loafers.

The king faced the boy and spoke.

“I have a mission for you. You have been in this castle for four years and are supposed to have learnt something besides ‘Idylls of the King.’ There is a maiden called Graduation in a high tower not too far from here. She has been imprisoned by her cruel great-aunt because she looks like Marilyn Monroe. Go get her—and wipe that smirk off your face.

“There is one danger that lies in your path. The cruel great-aunt has put a dragon before the tower to stop anyone from freeing the maiden. The dragon’s name is Regents. Good luck; you’ll probably fail.”

With these parting words of cheer, J.T. left the throne room and went down to the very, very dusty yard. As armor, he placed upon his head a beautiful blue and gold helmet, covered with buttons, flags and fox-tails. He clumbered into his jeep and roared off. Gazing back at the rapidly receding castle, he saw the king on one of the topless towers waving a turkish towel.

It was a pretty uneventful trip until in the distance he saw the tower. Then he saw the dragon Regents, and Joe felt terrible. I'd rather get a pink card any day than have to face this—ugh, monster, he thought. His knees started to shake; then the ground began to shake.

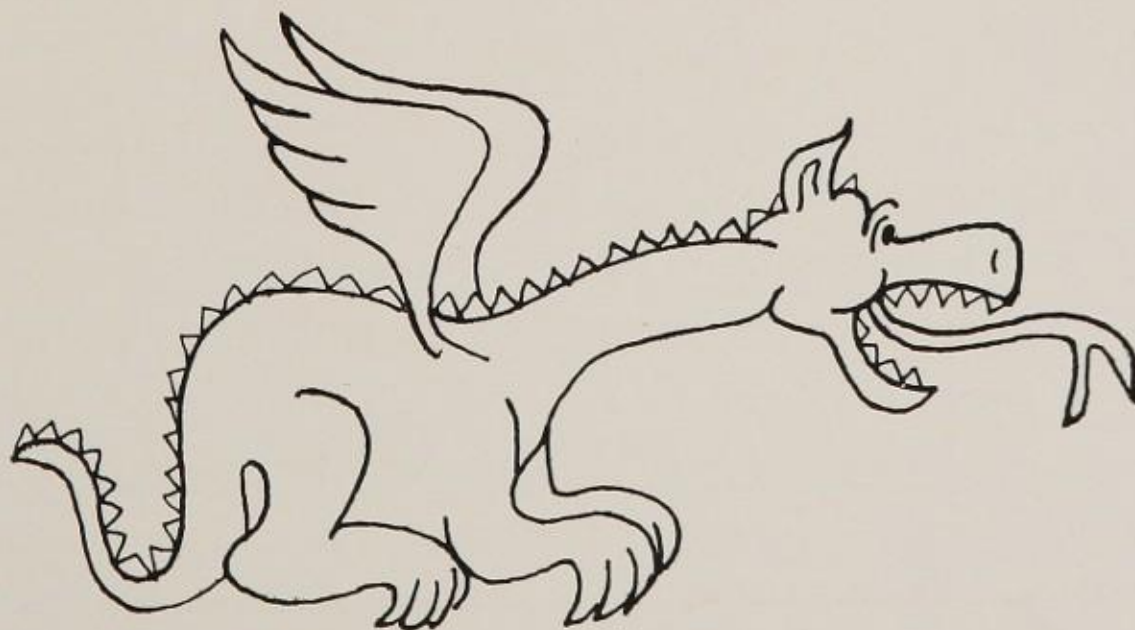

He saw the maiden now, leaning over the balcony waving a diploma at him. Gads, she was beautiful. He meant the maiden, not the diploma. He brought the jeep to a standstill and took out his pistols.

Regents slowly approached, and the sky began to darken. The wind whistled between Joe's ears. He cautiously approached the dragon, and leveling his guns, shut his eyes firmly. He squirted. PLOOP! A dull rumbling filled the air. Joe opened his eyes, and lo and behold, he was the victor. He had shot Regents right between English and American History.

With a glad moan he rushed up to the tower steps, past the fifth floor swimming pool, and grabbed Graduation.

As a matter of fact, all of you who have read this story are doing the same.

THE WISHING WELL

*Upon leaving the castle of Taft High
We've complaints to make and praises to sing,
So we stop before we say goodbye
To leave our teachers the following:
To Mrs. Umansky go four strong drums,
To the cafeteria a large box of Tums.
We've Tom and Harry for Mr. Dick,
For the infirmary we've someone who's really sick—
Hugs and kisses to Mrs. Harte,
And a motor for Mr. Bunnekamp's cart—
To Dr. Gluck with no dismay
We leave a million word essay,
And with it a mark of 64,
And a Republican class to Mr. Gore.
For Mr. Flood we leave a puddle,
To the cute cheer leaders a new Taft Huddle—
To Mrs. Greenwald with many thanks
We leave two great big piggy banks.
For Mr. Jason we've the Golden Fleece,
And Miss Krakow gets a lease on Nice.
To Mr. Consagra we leave a tie,
To Mr. Gleichenhaus a sigh,
And to all who dwell in this Taft High
We wish you well
and now
Goodbye.*

It's anything you please—
Just doff your good old senior hat
And solve this quiz with ease!*

Example: Part's a cinder, part's a name—
Both make a tale of storybook fame.

Which period do we like best of all?
2. Fe-fi-fo-fum
You'd better get rid of your -----

Where the sawdust does fly and the sparks do sputter.

Of the secret room on Taft's 5th floor.

One more point will do for me.
7. Wynken and Blynken wouldn't feel so odd
If they were to visit Taft's land of nod.

These are the words that are often heard when this dread card you see.

9. His homework, his money, his girl friend he lends—
That is to say, 'til the season ends.
10. Take two from seven dwarfs and add a few feet—
And you'll get a team that can't be beat.

If your hat has lost its power
We ask you not to frown—
Take hold of this page
And turn it upside down. . . .

Epilogue

When we were young children we dreamed of living in a world of princes and princesses, of fairies and knights, and of castles and kings. It was a place sprinkled with gold and silver, and it glowed constantly. When we were alone, it was our home.

As we grow older, the silver and gold fade out and we find ourselves in the midst of reality. People sometimes consider the world cruel and cold. They consider children lucky because they can dream. But as a child outgrows diapers, he also outgrows this kind of dream. There are many hardships which we all must face, but by facing these hardships we become better and more understanding people.

We of the Yearbook staff trust that we all shall find our proper place in this world of reality, but never forget the stardust fancy of our youth.

ELAINE HANDLIN

THE BEANSTALK

To our Senior Advisors, Mrs. Greenwald and Mr. Kaplan, whose aid and encouragement have made our Senior term one that we shall never forget.

To Mrs. Harte, Miss Gluck, and Mrs. DiDonato, who have sparked our yearbook with unlimited supplies of words, blurbs, and art work.

To Arthur Zuckerman, chapeaux maker supreme, and to Dieges-Clust, for supplying us with class keys and rings which will always symbolize our years at Taft.

To Bentley-Simon, whose rentals of caps and gowns added the right touch to our graduation ceremonies.

And lastly, to The Comet Press, Inc., for publishing and preserving our records in this volume.

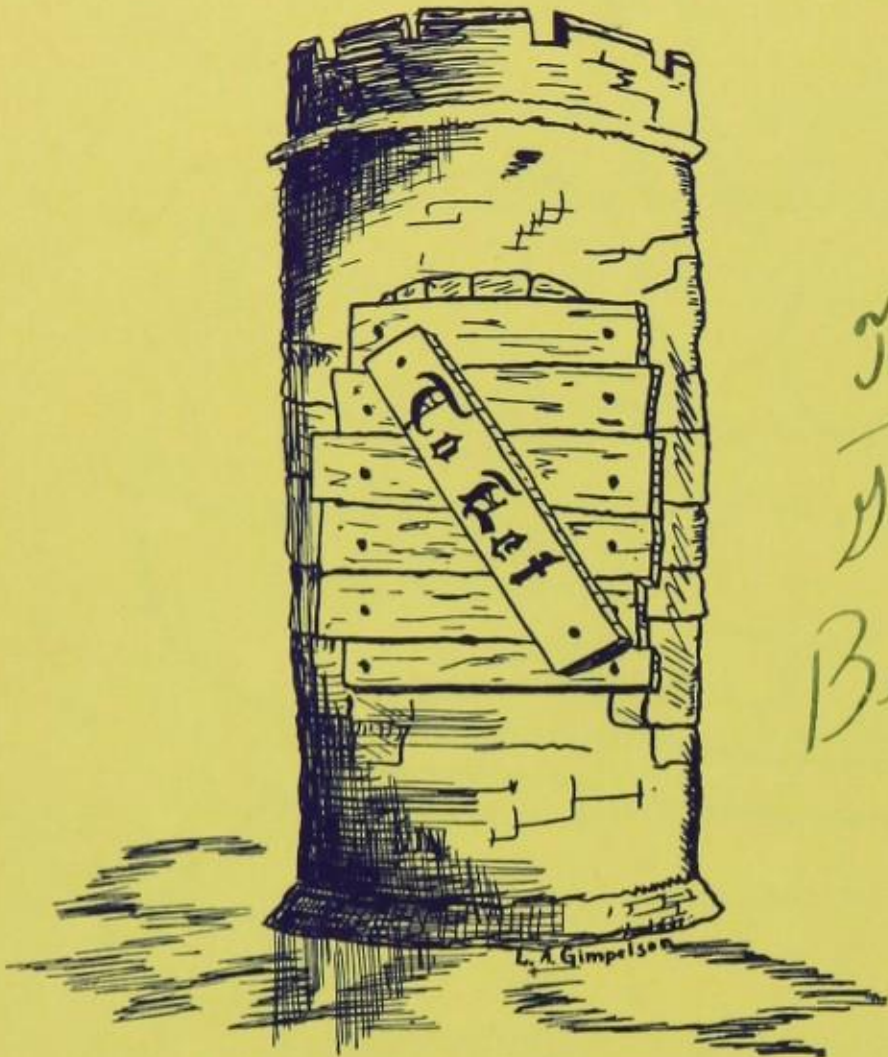

We give our thanks.

Now, it's time to come down to earth to start our travels on the road of reality. Here we're going to find our share of giants to slay. We will learn to overcome hurdles, and will seek once again the magic beans.
